Syrian Vice President Abdel Khalim Khaddam poured cold water on rising expectations that talks with Israel could be resumed anytime soon, announcing yesterday that Damascus would not budge from its insistence that talks continue where they "left off" under Labor.

Meanwhile, European Middle East envoy Miguel Angel Moratinos told reporters that Syrian President Hafez Assad asked him to secure a goodwill gesture from the Israeli government to resume peace talks, which have been suspended for about a year.

Moratinos said the request came during talks in Damascus yesterday that centered on how to resume the negotiations, which opened in Madrid in 1991.

Damascus interprets this to mean that former prime minister Yitzhak Rabin had already agreed to fully withdrawal from the Golan, and therefore the Netanyahu government must accept this and a May 1995 draft that calls for accepting certain principles to guide Golanrelated security arrangements.

Khaddam's remarks seems to dash hopes that Syria may be pulling back on its demands, and it stands in contrast to Netanyahu's optimism that a "bridging formula" will be found to bring about the resumption of talks during his meeting with US President Bill Climon on February 13.

Avi-Yitzhak questioned secretly in Bar-On case – report

By RAINE MARCUS and MICHAL YUDELMAN

Police secretly took evidence yesterday from attorney Dan Avi-Yitzhak in "Bar-On for Hebron" case, Israel Radio reported last night.

There has been speculation that Avi-Yitzhak leaked the story to Channel 1 reporter Ayala Hasson, according to the report.

Police are expected to summon Jerusalem Mayor Ehud Olmert today, the report added.

MK Arych Deri and Justice Minister Tzahi Hanegbi are also expected to be summoned to give evidence in the case within the Police and the State Attorney's Office requested permission from Knesset Speaker Dan Tichon to summon MKs for questioning in the controversial affair, in which Hasson said a deal was made whereby Shas would support the Hebron agreement if Roni Bar-On was named attorney-general and then arranged a plea bargain in Deri's fraud trial.

By EVELYN GORDON

Jerusalem District Court Judge Elyakim Rubinstein was unanimously approved by the cabinet as the new attorney-general yesterday, despite a last-minute hitch caused by his refusal to take a lie-detector test. Rubinstein will take office on February

12. The hitch arose over the General Security

Service's insistence that all senior government officials, including the attomey-general, pass a polygraph test before they take office. Rubinstein has been a vigorous opponent of polygraph tests for years, arguing that they are not only notoriously unreliable but also violate the Basic Law: Human Dignity and Freedom. He has there-fore refused to take a polygraph test in any of his previous senior governmental jobs, and refused to do so for this job as well. In the end, the cabinet solved the problem by setting up a high-level commission to study the entire issue of requiring polygraph tests from senior civil servants. The commission will be headed by Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu and will include the relevant ministers, representatives of the security services, jurists and Rubinstein hiniself, in his capacity as attorney-general. The commission is to complete its work within 60 days.

However, Rubinstein will essentially have veto power over the commission's decision because the attorney-general is the only person authorized to decide legal questions for the government. Thus if he decides the procedure is illegal, that settles the issue. It is only if he concludes that it is not illegal that the commission would be free to consider the question of whether it is necessary or wis

Rubinstein made this clear in a written statement to the cabinet.

"If, after the discussion in principle is completed, the procedure mandating the use of a polygraph for security checks remains in force, with the agreement of the attorneygeneral, the attorney-general will also fulfill this requirement," he wrole.

At a press conference following the meeting, Justice Minister Tzahi Hanegbi denied that Rubinstein's presence on the committee constituted a conflict of interest. If anyone suspects Rubinstein of allowing personal considerations to influence his decision, he noted, they can always petition the High Court of Justice and let that body decide.

"[Rubinstein] is not the only member of the legal community to raise doubts about this subject," he said. "But the legal question has never been decided."

Since most people do not object, he explained, there has not yet been a ruling on this issue.

Hanegbi said the lack of a polygraph examination will not prevent Rubinstein from taking office because many people do not take their tests until after they begin work. There is no legal obligation to take such a test, he added; this is merely a GSS demand which has become the norm over the years.

Cabinet Secretary Danny Naveb said this requirement had not always been in force, though he did not exactly know when the GSS had introduced it.

Meanwhile, the Movement for Quality Government in Israel asked Rubinstein yesterday to either take the test or refrain from entering office until the commission has finished its work.

Although polygraph results are not admissible in court here, they may be used to further investigations or to dispel allegations. In Japan, Horowitz said, polygraph results are admissible, and in the US such tests are always used before appointing employees to senior and sensitive posts.

"The polygraph test is more scientific than other methods of security investigations," Horowitz said. "Other methods for security clearances used by the IDF and security services include questioning neighbors, colleagues, friends, former employees and even former army commanders where human error, mere gossip, the settling of old scores or personal opinion may determine the candidate's future."

In a polygraph test the subject is asked questions directly, which include "control questions" rather than questions being posed behind the subject's back, he added. Polygraphists only ask questions that can be answered by "yes" or "no" and do not relate to feelings, ideas, tendencies or attitudes. Israeli Arab councils to renew protest

By DAVID RUDGE

Israeli Arab council leaders have decided to renew their sit-in strike opposite the Prime Minister's Office in Jerusalem to press the government to bail out the financially crippled local authorities.

The decision to renew the strike on February 9, at the end of Ramadan, was taken at a stormy meeting of the secretariat of the Arab Council Heads forum in Shfaram on Tuesday night. The participants accused the government of reneging on an agreement to cover deficits and increase budgets.

The Arab council heads had staged a sit-in protest for over five' weeks in a tent they pitched oppo-site the Prime Minister's Office to press the government to cover debts and raise budgets to those of councits in the Jewish sector.

The campaign was called off two weeks ago after the Treasury and the Interior Ministry agreed to give the 54 councils an extra NIS 160. million for regular budgets, spread over three years, and an additional NIS 40m. this year for development projects. A solution to the problem of accumulated debts, totalling over NIS. 400m, for all the councils, was deferred pending a meeting of the Effau committee, which was due to give its recommendations at the end of this month. The council heads charged, however, that they had since received a letter from the Interior Ministry stating that the promised additional funding would be conditional on the councils themselves increasing income from municipal taxes (arnona). "The original agreement did not" specifically state this condition," which is unacceptable as far as we. are concerned," said Hussein Suleiman, spokesman for the forum of Arab Council Heads. This negates the agreement reached with the government that was signed by all the council heads, because it doesn't take into account the lower-than-average socio-economic condition of most Arab citizens," said Hussein, himself head of Mash'had local council near Nazareth. The Interior Ministry, however, rejected the arguments, saying it had been made clear to the Arab council leaders that the additional funding would be conditional on them increasing municipal taxes and overall income.

Third Way, UTJ meet to discuss conversions

MKs from the Third Way met with members of United Torah Judaism yesterday in the first of several meetings to discuss the parties' stand on issues critical to them. MKs from both factors denied the reports that the meetings were aimed at creating a deal under which the Third Way would support the Conversion Law in return for UTJ support of the so-called Golan Heights Law.

The meeting only addressed the issue of conversions. The Third Way MKs said they favor maintaining the current situation under which conversions in Israel would need the authorization of the Chief Rabbinate but non-Orthodox conversions performed abroad would continue to be recognized. UTJ is fighting the possibility that non-Orthodox conversions per-formed in Israel would be recognized here.

Bill on free education passes first hurdle

The Knesses passed the preliminary reading of a bill yesterday that would grant free higher education to residents of development towns and poor neighborhoods. It was proposed by MK Ephraim Oshaya (Labor), who said it is intended as a means 10 close the social gaps between rich and poor and strengthen development areas.

Bill would limit donations to PM candidates

A candidate for the prime minister's position would not be allowed to accept donations out of the framework of the Party Funding Law under a bill which passed preliminary reading in the Knesset vesterday.

The bill was submitted by Yossi Sarid and Amnon Rubinstein (both Meretz) and was supported by the government. The bill would close a loophole discovered in the so-called Direct Election Law by which there is no concrete ban on a candidate for the premiership receiving donations oot approved under the Party Funding Law.

PM will try to include women in negotiations

Prime Minister Bioyamin Netanyahu has promised to try to include women in the diplomatic negotiating teams. The promise was delivered by the Prime Minister's Adviser on the Status of Women Emunah Elon to Naomi Chazan (Meretz) in a meeting of the Knesset Committee for the Status of Women.

Bill aims to ban overloaded trucks

The Knesset unanimously passed preliminary readiog of a bill which would place a 60-day road ban on trucks found to be overloaded. The bill was presented by Elic Goldschmidt (Labor), who said it was aimed at fighting the increase in road accidents involving trucks.

Bill would give grave desecrators 3-year term

A bill calling for a three-year prison sentence for anyone convicted of "illegally desecrating a grave or dishonoring the dead" passed preliminary reading in the Knesset yesterday. The bill was submitted by Shaul Yahalom (National Religious Party).

El Al to operate on Shabbat

By LIAT COLLINS

Shabbat was shot down in the Knesset yesterday when the coalition turned out in force for the vote while Labor MKs were largely absent or abstained.

The government broke off a meeting on the appointment of the attorney general for the vote on the bill, which was proposed by Avraham Poraz (Shinui-Meretz). It was supported by 10 MKs, 32 opposed it and four abstained

During the plenum discussion, Transport Minister Yitzhak Levy (National Religious Party) said he would like EI AI to stop operations several hours before Shabbat and resume them several hours after it to prevent Shabbat desectation.

Levy also said be would like to close Ben-Gurion Airport on Shabbat, even for foreign airlines. He said his ministry holds that whoever buys El Al when it is pri-

A bill proposing El Al operate on vatized would have to promise not to operate it on Shabbat.

"Not everything can be examined from the point of view of the size of the check," said Levy. "There are other things a country must protect, even if there is an economic price for it." Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu interjected from the plenum floor that Levy's opinion does not reflect the stand of the Prime Minister's Office, which is considers them Jewisb, and there in charge of the privatization policy. He added that the ban on Shabbat flights for El Al is in force only as long as the company is govenument owned.

Poraz said a US consulting firm estimated that El Al loses some $50 million a year because it does not fly on Shabbat. He said these figures would prevent the successful privatization of the company.

Bombay blaze kills three

BOMBAY-BOMBAY— Fire spread through the top floors of a 25-story Fire office tower today, killing three people and trapping others for about an hour high above the beaches of the Arabian Sea.

Firefighters' ladders reached to only the 14th floor, so rescuers had to bring people down the stairs to that level. About 21 people were evacuated through 14th-floor windows to safety.

The fire may have started in ply-wood and plastic being used for construction by an American consultant company on the 21nd floor, said Deputy Chief Fire Officer M.G. Sarkod.

Three bodies were found on the 22nd floor, Sarkod said. He said the vicums had suffocated.

The blaze began at Express Towers, in the presugious Nariman Point business district, which houses the Indian Express newspaper on the ground and first floor, and a number of domestic and multinational companies and banks.

Three people died in a room on the twenty-second floor that had been locked on the inside,"said city official Shridhar Joshi.

A police official said the three dead men were local canteen staff working for Pfizer Ltd, a US pharmaceutical company.

ISLAMABAD (Reuter) -Pakistan's Supreme Court said yesterday it bad upheld President Farooq Leghari's dismissal of former prime minister Benazir Bhutto, which means general elections will proceed as planned on February 3.

"There is enough material to establish corruption, nepotism and misrule," Chief Justice Sajjad Ali Shah said at the end of a hearing which began on January 13. "We uphold the order," he said of Legbari's dismissal of Bhutto on November 3. But Bbutto ahrugged off the ruling. "This is nothing unexpect-ed," she told a news conference at her home in the sonthern city of Karachi during a break from election campaigning.

"I knew they were going to give a decision against us. "Every time the Bontto family goes to the court, the decision is different. Every time the decision for the Bhuttos is unfavorable," she said.

Witnesses said the verdict was followed swiftly by clashes between police and Bhutto supporters outside the Islamabad court. They said police baton-charged stone-throwing demonstrators who were chanting pro-Bhutto slogans. There was no immediate word on injuries or arrests.

The Supreme Court's keenly awaited judgement, by a 6-1 majority of the seven-judge bench, also meant those who bought on the stock market in anticipation of such a decision had won their bets.

The stock market index in Karachi, Pakistan's commercial capital, rose 11.11 points, or 0.74 percent, on Wednesday and traders said speculators bad Court verdict.

They said prices were likely to continue climbing on Thursday with some predicting the Karachi stock index could rise another 70 points. Several top husinessmen also said they were happy with the ver-dict. "The judgment is good for the country and the economy,' said Maqbool Sadiq, head of the Karachi Cotton Association. Cotton and cotton goods are

Many people, especially women, in addition to having a change of bands and settings for their watches, also have several pairs of eyeglasses with different colored frames to with different colored frames to suit specific garments and occasions.

The fashion aspect of specta-cles is what has prompted many designers to branch into this line. One of the most recent is Gershon Bram, who has produced a signature range of superlight sunglasses for Galil Optic. The frames are made of featherweight plastic, some of it metal coated. Just as retro trends permeate collections of clothing, their influence is also seen in eyewear, with the Fifties, partic-ularly Jacqueline Kennedy, as inspiration. The essential difference is that the materials used today are much lighter and therefore more comfortable.

This applies equally to reading glasses. Although Galil Optic has already acquired an international reputation, it can't quite match that of Anglo-American, London, a quality firm which has been around since 1882. Anglo-American cellulose acctate frames are now available in Israel. The marketing franchise was acquired by Hani Barnea and Esther Zmorchinski, who are distributing them through their New Look company.

Even more retro than the Fifties are the Gipsy rimless and semi-rimless reading and sunglasses which are reminiscent of eyewear worn over a century ago. The half-frames are made of stainless steel and the functional finished product aptly conveys its purpose: all the better to see with

While Gipsy exudes a sense of severity, Prince of Italy, with its more shapely, elliptic frame, is not only more fashion conscious but also less expensive. The Gipsy price range is from NIS 285 to NIS 545, while Prince runs from NIS 250 to NIS 480.

Eyewear for the fashion conscious includes designs by (from top clockwise) Anglo American London Eyewear, Gipsy, Gershon Bram and Prince of Italy.

The funeral will be held at http//:www ...

Can't make the funeral? Just log in. Virtual funerals' are available on the Net, Allison Blankstein Nazarian reports from NY the "virtual world" is extending 10 the "virtual afterworld."

Funerals have become the latest life-cycle event that can be virtually experienced on the Internet. Simplex Knowledge Company, a software developer, has created Cybermourn, a video system created for funeral homes that allows mourners to participate in funerals via their personal computer.

"People don't grow up and die in the same neighborhoods anymore," said Jack Martin, the president and owner of Simplex, based in White Plains, New York. Distance, cost and jobs are among the factors that have contributed to what Martin said is a decline in funeral attendance in the US. "People physically cannot attend funerals anymore, he said, adding that this software fills the gap.

Cybermourn is being marketed to funeral homes, which, in turn, customize the virtual funerals according to their clients' wishes. Options for funeral websites include chat rooms where the virtual visitors can communicate with those who attend in person; video images that are transmitted from the service and updated every 30 seconds; and even subtle advertising for the funeral

Internet and crash someone's funeral," Martin said. "Some say this software sanitizes or packages death as a commercial product, but the reality is that death is already a commercial product," he said. "That's what funeral homes are for." But Jewish funeral directors are not convinced. "It just doesn't sound like something that would appeal to us," said Sonny Levitt, vice president of eight funeral homes in south Florida, "With Jewish funerals, people want to be there, to be a part of the shiva, to be a part of the mourning ," said Barry Wien, president of five funeral homes in northern

New Jersey and New York. People are more spread apart, but they do come in for a funeral." But he said, "I think it is a wonderful thing for an isolated case where for some reason somebody can't come and wants to participate However, Levitt noted, not everyone has a computer, especially among the senior-citizen population, and those who do may not know how to download the necessary programs. And because Jewish

One of the commandments of mourning is comforting the mourner, said Doniel Kramer, an Orthodox rabbi in New York. If this cannot be done in person, the phone or Internet can be an option, but not an equal substitute. He cautioned that with each step away from full personal contact, the level of fulfillment of the commandment decreas-

There is also a danger of using new technology as a "cop-out or an excuse to miss a funeral," Kramer warned. But he said, "In general, anything that allows people to pay their respect if they cannot be there personally is mentorious."

Software such as Cybermourn is "almost too convenient," said Jay Rosenbaum, a Reform rabbi who is an officer of the New York Board of Rabbis. If there is an extreme case in which there is no other method for connection, the Internet can be a viable option, Rosenbaum said. But he foresees little need for such software at Jewish funerals. "The Jewish community has by and large made the decision that there is no substitute for being at the chapel, at the cemetery."

Blowing a fuse over the electricity system

aving grown up in New York City, I'd never known that there was such a thing as a fuse box, let alone where it was located. In those days, as far as I could tell. hot water was one of nature's ele-ments which just happened to flow freely from the left side of the tap. And appliances ran by mere virtue of having been plugged into an outlet.

It was not until I moved to Israel that I learned to plan a shower, and "stagger" my machines. Very quickly I learned to locate my fuse box, wherever I was living. I even came to know which little levers controlled which circuits - information invaluable when planning a shower, doing the laundry and baking a cake simultaneously. What I did not know at the time amperes provided by the Israel Electric Corporation for regular home use (as opposed to restaurant/factory use) was a single phase of 25 amps. What I also did not know was that most heavy-duty appliances in Israel use up to 16 amps each. No wonder, then, that more than one large machine in operation at any given time was extending the limit. Hence, the fuse tripping and hence the necessary "staggering.

A few years ago, the IEC Consumer Division issued new regulations regarding the supply of electricity to individual homes. This was to "answer a growing demand" among Israeli consumers and to "improve the quality of the supply of electricity." According to the new regulations, homes built after December 1988 would be eligible for an electricity "upgrade" to was that the standard amount of '40 amps on a single phase; homes built subsequent to that date would automatically be equipped with 40 amps - now the "standard." Three phases could and can be installed (from 25 amps per phase and above) without regard to these regulations.

A short while later, I began renovating a dilapidated old house, in which the electrical wiring was in an atrocious state and needed total overhaul. This would be the perfect opportunity to take advantage of the new IEC regulations. Instead, I was urged to install three phases. The high cost of installation would be a small price to pay - I was told by several mavens (among them a friend employed by the IEC) for the luxury of never tripping a fuse

Taking "three-phase" to mean a "triple" supply of electricity, I was sold on the idea, and went ahead with it. For the next few years, all was well with circuit and fuse box. Happily, I ran dish- to have three phases with as washer and washing machine, oven and boiler with little ado.

According to consultant electrical engineer Jonathan Greenstein, the smooth running of my electrical system had to do with proper balancing more than with three phases. Apparently the beavy-duty appliances in my home ended up being balanced appropriately between the three phases. Had my dishwasher and washing machine been on the same 25-amp phase, I would still have had to deal with fuse tripping. In other words, though I imagined that my house was being supplied with 75 amps, it was actually giving me less use of these amps than if I had installed a single phase at the same number of amps.

So, what's the catch? The IEC will not allow homes to have a single phase providing more than 40 amps, though it will allow us factory reply 10 his questions.

many amps as we want. According to Greenstein, this is as much hogwash as it is whitewash. It is also a waste of electricity potential, since it is extremely rare for individual families to require large numbers of amps on each phase but important to have enough amps in the home to service modern household appliances.

In the UK, for example, homes can have up to 100 amps on a single phase, which is equivalent to the 200 amps available in the US. In Israel, he claims, there is no reason not to follow suit, other than the "good ol' boy" network of "protectionism for the country's electricians and electrical engineers."

Greenstein has been leading a personal crusade to convince the IEC to change its system. As of vet. he has been given no satisphases

In the meantime, let us beware of the following:

When purchasing an appliance, always find out the number of amps it uses. While Israeli appliances are never more than 16 amps (with the exception of the Aumor electric shower, which is OUL. 20-22 amps), American and English appliances are up to 45 amps. (Such appliances would not suil a home here, unless it had three phases of over 45 amps each). Also keep in mind that standard circuits in this country are 16 amps. (The circuits are the smaller "branches" of the phase.) Before planning the electrical system of a home you are building - or before upgrading your existing system - consult with an electrical adviser. It is imperative that all major appliances be halanced properly on circuits and gers involved in three-phase electricity:

Firstly, a loose neutral wire in the main fuse panel can cause the voltage level on each of the phases to swing violently. This can cause certain appliances to hurn

Secondly, there is greater danger of electrical shock prior to the tripping of the mimsar pehat (the anti-electrocution lever). For real safety, you'd need an and-electrocution device on each of the three phases.

For further details and information about your current current. you can contact Jonathan Greenstein al POB 4525, Jerusalem 91044. Phone/Fax: (02) 566-3510.

You are invited to offer personal stories about goods and services in this country. Write to: Ruthie Bium, POB 81, And finally, beware of the dan- 91000 Jerusalem.

Playing the Lebanese card

In a characteristically iconoclastic speech this guarded by such an international force, and week at Tel Aviv University. Labor MK and Lparty leadership candidate Yossi Beilin called for a unilateral Israeli withdrawal from southern Lebanon. IDF Intelligence chief Moshe Ya'alon, speaking from the same podium, rejected Beilin's suggesuon, saying that the residents of northern Israel would suffer.

According to Beilin, "We have become bostages in Lebanon. Our soldiers are sitting targets for Hizbullah. We need to get out unilaterally with the help of a third party." As part of this proposed deal, the Lebanese army would incorporate most of the South Lebanese Army (SLA) and would disarm the Hizbullah mititia.

The idea of a unilateral withdrawal, combined with substitute arrangements to protect Israel's interests, should not be rejected out of hand. The scenario that Beilin describes - Hizbullah disarmed, the SLA absorbed, and an international force keeping terrorists away from Israel's border - is practically idyllic from Israel's perspective. In fact one might ask why, if such a plan is feasible, bas it not been done long ago,

The question is whether such a plan is any more realistic than Israel's current goal of negotiBting with Syria a withdrawal from Lebanon. Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's initial foray into the Syrian track was the "Lebanon first" proposal. Rather than tackle the difficulties of a Golan deal, he proposed reaching agreement on Lebanon that would sidestep both sides' main goals - the Golan for Syria and a peace treaty for Israel - and instead aim for a less comprehensive outcome.

The Netanyahu government never provided full details of its "Lebanon first" idea. One concept is that the Lebanese army would disarm Hizbullah and effectively take the place of Israel in securing the Lebanese border. Given that Syria is happy to maintain a proxy guerrilla war against Israeli soldiers in southern Lebanon, Syria is likely to prevent the Lebanese government from accepting such a proposal.

Another version of a limited "Lebanon first" agreement between Israel and Syria would bave Israel leaving Lebanon, Syria allowing Hizbullah to be disarmed by the Lebanese and ending its support of Palestinian terrorism against Israel (and Turkey and Jordan), and the United States taking Syria off the list of pariah states subject to economic sanctions. In essence, Syria would relinquisb its terrorism card in whether the Beilin proposal is any less subject to a Syrian veto than the other "Lebanon first" scenarios.

A major element in determining what it will take to protect Israel's border following an Israeli withdrawal is discerning Hizbullah's intentions and capabilities in such a case. Having dedicated itself to ejecung Israel, would its support diminisb drastically if it were to continue fighting against Israel across the border? How effectively could the Lebanese army take control of the area, disarm Hizbullah, and secure the border? In essence, the viability of any of these options depends greatly on bow serious the two major outside players. France and the United States, would be in pusbing for at least a partial solution to the Lebanese dilem-

It is arguable that even if France and the US could not compel Syria to reach an agreement directly with Israel, they could prompt Damascus to stand by as they pave the way for Israel to leave Lebanon. Such a US-French initiative would, after all, be demanding that the Syrians acquiesce to something that Syria supposedly not only supports, but demands - the withdrawal of Israel from Lebanon. Syria would be on very weak diplomatic ground, to say the least, if it were to object to an internationally guaranteed Israeli withdrawal from Arab territory.

It would be naive, of course, to believe that there is a limit to Syria's cynicism in this matter, or that Syria will readily bamstring its ability to use terrorism and proxy warfare as centerpieces of its foreign policy. But neither should the international community act as if it is without recourse in dealing with Syria.

To take one small example, the United States could reverse its just-revealed policy of waiving sanctions to allow exports that do not contribute directly to Syria's ability to support terrorism. Other nations on the US terrorism list, such as Iran and Iraq, do not enjoy such an exemption, and it could be revoked from Syria either by the administration or the Congress.

The US and France could also threaten to start calling a spade a spade and say that Syria is holding up the peace process, and violating the Taif Accords requiring its partial withdrawal in Lebanon.

The idea of "Lebanon first," in any of its permutations, should not be thought of as a dead letter - it depends on whether outside forces

ER Weizman's heroic Israeli-warrior image shines as brightly today as it ever did.

As a volunteer teenage RAF pilot in World War II he saw action in the Far East. In 1948 he took part in downing five British Spitfires that were supporting the Egyptian armed forces invading the newborn Jewish state.

As Israel's first air force commander, he masterminded the stunning aerial onslaught that knocked out the Egyptian air force on the ground, paving the way for a dazzling Israeli victory in the Six Day war.

Promoted to deputy chief of staff under Yitzbak Rabin, he had the foresight to insist that Motti Hod replace him as air force commander. Hod went on to create what Western experts came to call "The world's number one air force."

Weizman remained as flamboyant in peace as in war. Long after quitting active service, he went on piloting his personal black Spitfire. Once, out on a jaunt, he found himself facing one of the greatest personal challenges of his

Alright, agreed, the Israeli media spew out a lot of garbage. There are loads of stories based on nothing, the lowest, cheapest kind of tear-jerking and hysteriamongering - and, yes, politically slanted reporting, mainly from the Left, sometimes from the Right. But the news media aren't all

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

BROADCASTING HISTORY

Sir. - As a journalist and author who was working with the British Forces Broadcasting Service in Jerusalem, Beit Jala, Sarafand and Haifa during 1947-48, and who has been a regular visitor ever since to Israel and Cyprus, I am putting together something of the history of broadcasting in the area, with the intention of publishing it for the 50th anniversary celebrations in 1998.

In addition to the transmissions of the Palestine Broadcasting Service, the Forces Broadcasting Service and Shary al-Adna, there were various illicit Hagana transmitters.

In connection with the latter 1 would particularly like to hear from Frederich Sonton, if he is still alive. He would now be aged 77. We sus-

SERIOUS THREAT

Sir. - The Oslo Agreement, according to the PLO's interpretation, means the transfer of a region 5 km wide x 50 km long connecting Hebron to Gaza. The inevitable consequence will be disconnecting the Negev from central Israel - the destruction of the great achievement of Operation Yoav in 1948, of which the master planner was Rabin. Netanyahu is going to give to the enemy what Rabin rescued. The decision to retreat from Hebron will lead inevitably to the disconnection of the Negev. If Israel does not have the strength to defend the eternal Maccabim-Reut.

THE HEVRA KADISHA

Sir, - I was in Israel a few weeks ago and read in the Post about the situation regarding your Hevra Kadisha. To say that I was disgusted is putting it mildly. These men are asking for more money, when they are already receiving princely salaries. This is disgraceful. To carry oul tahara is a mitzva - the highest one can perform - and if these men are truly religious then they will not look for rewards in this life.

In a prompt counterattack, he sent his helmet and other flying gear by special messenger to Air Force commander Eitan Ben-Eliyahu with this message: "The helmet and other gear are all too big for you. The major-general's insignia, however, will fit."

Perhaps the LAF chief will indulge the veteran flyer. The sight of the 72-year-president "on active duty" would certainly raise morale and boost motivation among today's young recruits.

We wish our president many more happy hours up in the air at the controls. We remember and bonor his past heroism.

Lieberman is merely the most feared individual in the administration, supposedly a regular Prince of Darkness.

Besides their friends - and, in Deri's case, the Sephardi haredim - is anybody rooting for these guys? Anybody crying, "Arye, Dudi, Ivet, say it ain't so"? There wouldn't be any damage to the system, no outpouring of sorrow, if this ferociously powerful trio took a fall.

On the other hand, if Channel I's story evaporates; we lose Israel Broadcasting Authority head Mordechai Kirschenbaum, wbo's probably done more good things for Israeli television than anybody else; ITV director Yair Stern and news editor Rafik Halaby, two of the country's best journalists; and Ayala Hasson. whose accuracy is still in question, but whose bravery isn't.

And we may well lose ITV altogether. Coming from America, I've always been a defender of Channel I. After watching an evening of American TV, you're stapider than when you started; after an evening of Channel I, you're smarter.

So I have a very clear set of interests in "Bar-On for Hebron" being true. But I think the bulk of the public may be less partisan. The Israeli "common man," looks at this story and says: If it's true, some politicians, a contractor and maybe a lawyer or two go down. If it isn't, a bunch of mediacrats are finished. I'm in a winwin situation. I can just sit back

I cannot fire him, because we are equal partners. Nor do I wish to dismantle the business, which is prospering, thanks to me. What can I do?

In Business with a Bum Somewhere in Israel Dear Bommed out by the Bom, Most of us are raised to believe that partnerships are based on an equal balance of give-and-take. This couldn't be farther from the truth. In fact, human relations usually end op as a kind of tugof-war, in which the more responsibility one of the partners takes, the more the other forfeits. This is as true of business partnerships as it is of marriage. It applies to parenthood and friendsbip, as well as to teachers and pupils.

It is probably a safe assumption that you did not select this particolar colleague to become your partner in business as a result of his sloth or wastefulness. There must have been other qualities. you saw in him which caught your attention.

Once in business together, you took on the role of the "ant," enabling him to slip comfortably into that of "grasshopper." In order to rectify the situation, you will have to forfeit some of the responsibility, and drop it in his lap. If he still is incapable of doing his share, you may end up dismantling the partnership - perhaps by buying bim out and finding a replacement. But give him a chance to tug at his end of the rope before acting in haste.

plit between his sense of being "a full-fledged Israeli citizen Dand being part of the Palestinian entity," Dr. Muhammed Amara is not a run-of-the-mill Bar-Ilan University lecturer. Amara's vision for Israel is of a secular egalitarian state. He wants the State of Israel to recognize its Arab minority as a national minority, with an anthem, and a flag with which the Israeli Arabs can identify. Born in the village of Zalafa, near Umm el-Fahm, Amara recounts that, aged 14, he applied for a high school in Haifa, but with a poor schooling background and a limited knowledge of Hebrew, he gave up and returned to graduate from the village school. Although after graduating, the study of law was his first preference, he felt that there were too many obstacles to overcome and instead he decided to study English at Bar-Ilan and become a teacher.

The turning point came when Amara was offered the opportunity to study for a master's degree in social linguistics. He would research the influence of Hebrew and English languages on Palestinian Arabic. This led to the study of the political bebavior patterns of the Israeli Arabs, and on to a position at Bar-Ilan University as a lecturer in the Department of Political Science.

Bar-Ilan prides itself on being a heterogeneous institution, but in fact the environment is highly religious," comments Amara. "For instance, male students are requested to wear kippot. Often, opening sessions at the faculty meetings are conducted by reading parts of the Torah portion of the week. The common dimension here is a shared political view, hence my dialogue is much more complex. It is true that Yigal Amir was a student at the university, but I am convinced that he represented only a fringe element. Perhaps one or two faculty members didn't regret openly the death of the prime minister; everyone else was in total shock."

Although happy on the campus, Amara is far from happy at the lack of progress vis-a-vis the State of Israel and the Palestinians.

Dr. Muhammed Amara has found a comfortable niche as a Moslem teaching political science to Orthodox Jews. (Jonathan Reif)

Since 1947 the Israelis have had a chance to solve the problem, but did nothing." Amara hopes that Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu is a pragmatist and not an ideologist. "Otherwise we are all fated, including my beloved university, to find ourselves in a situation of total way with unconventional warfare by the Arab countries against Israel. And since the political right is in power, I must make sure that there is a flow of communications between the Israeli Arabs and a religious Zionist university." But, "the flow of communications is very much one-sided, after all, he is the professor and we are students." says Avi Ziv. "Everyone agrees that Amara is well versed in his field, very respectful to his students, and an excellent lecturer. When Amara states in his political science class, 'I am more of a Palestinian than Israeli,' the tension is palpable. We live in such confusing times. I listen in order to learn, knowing that objectivity is not always possible when a man is so deeply involved in his cause."

As is the case with most Israeli Arabs, Amara had to go through the school of hard knocks to achieve success in the Jewish state - "a state that prides itself on democracy, but has failed to treat its Arab minority as equal.

"How can I swear allegiance to a Jewish state? How can I be faithful to symbols of a different tradition, how can I sing the anthem where Zion and Jerusalem, the epitome of Jewish longing, mean nothing to me?" "With such political beliefs what are you doing at Bar-Ilan University?" I ask Amara,

"Contrary to what is believed," he says. "Bar-Ilan is far from a bastion of right-wing activities. The university's image has been wrongfully tainted. Even as an Arab student and lecturer I have never encountered anything but friendliness."

Culture shock for Arab students at BIU

What made bright-eyed Fahima (not her real name) from Kafr Kassem wearing the traditional chador, spunky Hadil from the same village, pretty Mirarat from Kafr Arara, Abo Alo Muhammed from Wadi Ara, and Molhar from Tira, choose to study there? "Our fathers [who pay tuition] want us to study at a religious university," they agree unanimously.

Mirarat's parents came to verify that the women's dormitory was guarded, which was not the case on other campuses, Mirarat was terri-fied to come to Bar-llan. "The religious will slaughter you,' was the typical comment in the village, but in fact it is just the opposite."

English terms are so prevalent is a real hurdle, but does not compare to the problems of finding accommodation. The male students have to find accommodation outside the campus. "When calling regarding apartments for rent we are told to come. As soon as the landlord sees us, the standard answer prevails sorry, we have just rented." So, they commute or they sleep at friends' apartments. Muhammed's lucky break came when an angry apartment owner wanted to annoy her neighbors, "so she rented to Arabs." The women students reside in nism changed to friendship. All those whom I interviewed admitted that friendships with Jewish students were limited to the campus. Rarely, if ever, have there been cases of socializing in each other's homes.

Muhammed, like many of the Arab students, chose to study Hebrew language and literature. He "decided to concentrate on the Spanish era and the Middle Ages since so much of the prayers and philosophy are based on the verse and prose of those times." Hadil, a literature graduate from Beit Berl, a teachers' college, switched to Bar-Ilan. "At Bar-Ilan we have a center for Arab students. 1 like a compact campus, where one doesn't get the feeling of being lost among the mulotudes."

Tourism is a moncy-generating industry, which we should milize. We are just at the beginning of the road," said Khalid Rabah al-Harbi, director of the department of tourism at the Jeddah Chamber of Commerce and Industry." We are concentrating on domestic tourism and tourism from Gulf countries due to the special situation of visas in the kingdom. There is no trend to encourage foreign tourists," said Harbi, who is also a member of the National Tourism Committee.

Industry experts say Westerners would not be targeted in the new tourism campaign in a country where women have to cover up and are not allowed to drive, and alcohol, gambling and mixing of single men and women are banned under Islamic norms. "There is no way that they would open the doors to your average Western tourist," one expert said.

Abdul-Mohsen al-Hakir, chairman of the private National Tourism Committee, said in recent remarks in the Saudi press that Saudi tourists tourism packages which they did not do before."

spend 10 times more abroad than American tourists and 12 times more than European travelers. The latest official statistics show that in 1995 spending $8 billion, Harbi said. "If we can attract 10 to 20 percent of this towards domestic tourism it will be an achievement," he said.

Armed with petrodollars, Saudis are used to vacationing abroad, mostly in Europe and Asia, on average three times a year. Summer is especially popular, as people try to escape searing temperatures at home. That, however, is changing with government spending cuts due to weak oil prices until early 1996 denting consumer confidence. More Saudis are looking for local vacations and need places to do that. The small tourism industry is also seeking to cater to the needs of a fast-growing, mostly youthful population, in a country of 18 million, including six million expatriates.

Harbi said more Saudis are looking into holidaying at home due to "growing awareness" and not financial reasons. "It is not a question of less money, there is more awareness now that Saudis can spend holidays here," he said. "Travel agents are being encouraged to organize domestic

Experts question bow successful the campaign will be in attracting Saudis, some of whom admit they travel abroad to enjoy some of the social freedoms lacking in their own country. "Many Saudis like to vacation abroad, where they can let their hair down a bit," one said.

New tourist developments worth about 15 million rivals (54 million) are being built, including two buge Red Sea projects comprising entertain-ment cities and villa complexes, they say. Officials speak of the infant industry opening up scope for investments. They cite modern communications, roads, clean beaches, historic sites like Mecca and Medina and the mountains of Asir. Abha and Taif.

But an added attraction is being advertised. The Saudi Gazene daily in September 1996 reported the Holiday Inn botel in the eastern city of Jubail was promoting the Jubail industrial city as a tourist attraction. "You can see world-class petrochemical complexes, the pride of Saudi Arabia, the buge oil refineries, industrial companies," the hotel said. It added that men and women would be taken on tours on separate buses and tourists "will have to abide by a number of restrictions, including the prohibition against taking photos." (Reuter) etter bombs can slip past the US Postal Service and private security officials so easily that authorities leave it up to recipients to identify them before they explode.

The people who receive these kinds of devices are in the best position to determine if they're something suspicious," John Brugger, spokesman for the US Postal Inspection Service, said earlier this month.

The Postal Service makes no systematic effort to screen mail for potential bombs. Meridor to renew effort for capital market reforms with Italian

Cabinet approves more structural changes in economy

By DAVID HARRIS

The Treasury will resume its campaign to reform the capital markets as recommended by the Brodet Committee, Finance Minister Dan Meridor said yesterday.

Speakiog to the finance section of the Chambers of Commerce, Meridor promised to again bring the report's recommendations before the government for approval in the coming weeks.

While the government approved much of the report following its publication in mid-September, the key proposal - to tax interest on short- and mid-term savings to encourage longterm investments - was not approved.

Instead, a new committee was formed comprising Treasury director-general and original committee chairman David Brodet, Prime Minister's Office deputy director-general Moshe Leon, and Bank of Israel monetary division head David Kleio.

Its task was to agree on a compromise between the Meridor-backed Brodet report and the Prime Minister's Office-led opposition to taxing the popular short- and mid-term savings. This committee's members failed to reach agreement. As a result, Meridor and a less-keeo Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu agreed the debate should be renewed at cabinet level. Among the original committee's recommendations are: taxing short- and mid-term savings accounts by five percent to 10%; offering tax breaks for savings plans of 10 years or longer, and instituting a series of reforms in Tel Aviv's stock and bond markets. Retirement plans - including pension funds, life insurance, and provident funds - would eojoy higher tax breaks than at present.

Savings plans for periods longer than 10 years would be fully tax exempt, while a 10% tax would be imposed on training funds for periods shorter than 10 years.

In the capital markets, the report recommends reducing taxes on negotiable bonds, dividends, and gains on foreign securities, as well as the establishment of a second mortgage market based on the US model.

Meanwhile, the cabinet approved yesterday all but two of the outstanding proposals from the Treasury blueprint for structural reforms in the economy, which are largely designed to encourage deregulation, demonopolization and create greater efficiency, particularly in the

and a second second

With some two-thirds of the 25 proposals having already passed the cabinet stage, the fol-lowing five additional measures received.

*Alterations in the water pricing system. *Reducing the oumber of exemptions from municipal tax (arnona).

*Speeding up land development for housing projects. *Reducing ooise levels on highways.

*Privatization of public housing management

Some of these measures require further committee discussion and others Knesset approval.

In addition to this last proposal, Netanyahu set up a ministerial committee comprising himself, Meridor, Labor and Social Affairs Minister Eli Suissa, Immigratioo and Absorption Minister Yuli Edelstein, and deputy Construction and Housing Minister Meir Porush to consider how to sell public bousing. The committee will report within six months. The two reforms oot yet approved, the sale of land for constructing apartments and a levy for tapping water resources, will be discussed at one of the next regular cabinet meetings municipality spokesman Haggai Elias, who confirmed that foreign companies and iovestors have expressed interest in participating in the project.

Initially, the light railway will be constructed, along roads and underground between four main stations: in Bayit Vagan; at the entrance to the city, near the Jerusalem International Convention Center and the new central bus station; alongside Jaffa Gate; and the central light railway station at the Jerusalem Mall, which will be linked to the Tel Aviv-Jerusalem train line that passes nearby.

The municipality insists the system will be economically viable and only has to decide on the exact routes between the four stations.

United beats Wimbledon to go top

LONDON (Reuter) Manchester United came from behind to beat Wimbledon 2-1 yesterday - a result which takes the team top of the Premier League for the first time this sea-SOIL.

The defending champions leapfrogged over arch-rivals Liverpool, who were not in action. Andy Cole scored the United winner seven minutes from the end.

Newcastle also fought back from a goal down, scoring four times in the last 16 minutes to beat Everton 4-1 at St. James's Park to give manager Kenny Dalglish his first league victory since he took over from Kevin Keegan earlier. this month. Arsenal won 2-1 at neighbors

West Ham to join Liverpool on 46 points, a point behind United. Newcastle remain fourth oo 42 points.

In the night's sole League Cup tie Second Division Stockport came from a goal down to triumph 2-1 at Premier League Southampton in a quarter-final replay. Substitute Andy Mutch scored their winner in the 83rd minute. Stockport faces Middlesbrough in the semifinal. PREMIER LEAGUE RESULTS: Aston Villa 0, Sheffield Wednesday 1 Leeds 0, Derby 0 Leicester 1, Sunderland 1 Manchester United 2, Wimbledon 1

S. African batsmen ensure victory

CAPE TOWN (Reuter) - South Africa's batsmen ensured an effi-cient five-wicket victory over Zimbabwe yesterday to maintain their 100 percent record in the triangular one-day series. Each of the seven South African batsmen reached double figures as the host side easily attained their asking rate of 4.5 runs an over, reaching their target of 227 with 18 balls to spare.

Gary Kirsten, who shared a half-century opening partnership with Andrew Hudson (26) was the top scorer with 55.

Zimbabwe's 226 for six was based on 52 from opener Andy Waller plus a vigorous unbeaten 57 off 44 balls with seven fours and a six from Dave Houghton.

The Zimbabwe coach shared a 51-run sixth wicket partnership in 59 balls with his skipper Alistair Campbell and an unbroken seventh wicket stand of 50 in 32 balls with Guy Whittall (26 not out).

South Africa will miss out on a place in the final in Durban on February 12 only through an unlikely combination of circumstances including a second tie between Zimbabwe and India.

NEW YORK (AP) - Shaquille O'Neal, Karl Malone and Clyde Drexler expect to be All-Stars every season. Tom Gugliotta, Christian Lactmer and Eddje Jones, on the other hand, are new to this sort of thing.

Gugliotta, Laettner and Jones made the NBA All-Star team for the first time Tuesday when the Eastern and Western conference coaches each picked their seven reserves.

"Your goal isn't just to make the NBA," said Lactmer, an Atlanta forward. "Your goal is to be con-sidered a very good player in the NBA. And for that to happen, you have to be an All-Star." O'Neal, meanwhile, will be starting the All-Star game on the bench for the first time in his five years

The East reserves are Vin Baker of Milwaukee, Terrell Brandon of Cleveland, Tini Hardaway and Alonzo Mourning of Miami, Dikembe Mutombo and Laeuner of Atlanta and Glen Rice of Charlotte. The starters for both teams were announced previ-

For the East, it's Chicago's Michael Jordan and

Penny Hardaway of Orlando at guard, Patrick Ewingof New York at center, and Grant Hill of Detroit and Scottie Pippen of Chicago at forward. For the West, it's Gary Payton of Seattle and John Stockton of Utah at guard, Olajuwon at center, and Charles Barkley of Houston and Shawn Kemp of Seanle at forward. There still could be some changes on the rosters.

Tuesday that line Barkley for 10 days and Drexler for two games. Among those left off the teams were Toronto guard Damon Stoudamire, Golden State forward Joe Smith and Minnesota forward Kevin Garnett.

The customary stampede to beat the season's transfer deadline in the National League and Second Division ended at four o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Former league champlons Maccabi Tel Aviv added over a million shekels to its coffers as it divested itself of three more players in a bid to trim its large playing staff. As part of the cutback, the club recently sold Yevegny Kashentsev and Boris Metveyev.

The most noteworthy sale sees attacker Nir Sevila join current runaway leaders in the top flight, Betar Jerusalem, Full back Ya'acov ilel will continue to nly his trade with Hapoel Taiba, while Amit Levy will take to the field for his next outing in the colors of Maccabi Herzliva. Hapoel Taiba signed five new players yesterday. In addition to Hillel, Eyal Beigleibter, paign with just one senior goalkeeper, Avi Tamir Daniel, Bilal Mansur and Slovakian import Tibensky are joining the fight to save the National League's bottom club from areturn straight to Divisioo Two.

Hapoel Kfar Sava sold Hungarian star Gabor Marton to thie challenger Hapoel Petah Tikva for more than NIS 450,000. The club resigned former player-Kobi-Refuan from Bnei Yehuda, and took Bogadan Ubijec from Taiba.

Maccabi Petah Tikva signed Alexander Bugaichuk from Ironi Rishon Lezion on a. loan deal to the end of the season.

One big surprise was the last minute breakdown in negotiations between Hapoel Beersbeba and Hapoel Taiba for the transfer of Taiba goalkeeper Mickey Dahan. The southerners intended to sign Dahan as cover for Shaul Smadja who fractured a leg in trainiog earlier this week. As a result, Beersheba will have to play the second half of the cam-

O'Neal was a four-time starter for the Eastern Conference when he was with the Orlando Magic. But the Los Angeles Lakers center, second in the league in scoring to Michael Jordan, will back up Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon for the West.

"He's a legend in the game," O'Neal said of Olaiuwon. "That's fine."

The Nos. 3, 4 and 5 scorers - Malone of Utah, Latrell Sprewell of Golden State and Mitch Richmond of Sacramento - also were picked for the West

The other West reserves are Drexler of Houston, Gugliotta of Minnesota and Jones, the NBA steals leader from the Lakers.

Gugliotta is the first Minnesota player ever to make the All-Star team.

"I think we've added some legitimacy to this organizadon with the new management we have and the players we have," Gugliotta said. "Now to have a player named as an All-Star is going to add to it. I think you're seeing a lot of positive things come out, and there's going to be a lot more to come."

Jones said his work in the offseason paid off with a trip to the game in Cleveland on February 9.

I put myself in posicion to be a better player," be said. "Not for rewards, but to be better for this team. When you get rewards like this, it's for what you did in the summer."

Indiana guard Reggie Miller, Milwaukee forward Glenn Robinson, Philadelphia guard Allen Iverson, Washington forward Chris Webber and New Jersey swingman Kendall Gill - all of them averaging more than 20 points - also were left off.

Stoudamire, averaging 20.3 points, 8.2 assists and 4.1 rebounds, was last season's Rookie of the Year. "I'm not mad, I'm disappointed," be said. "They were telling me no one from a team with under .500 record made the team. I guess now records dictate everything in this league."

Everyone on the East squad played for a team that was at .500 or better going into Tuesday night's games.

This is the 10th All-Star selection for Malone and Drexler, the fifth for Richmond, the fourth for Tim Hardaway, Mourning and Mutombo, the third for Baker and Sprewell, and the second for Brandon and

Israeli handball team

beats Greece

The national handball team celebrated a healthy opening performance in the qualifying rounds of the European Championsbips last night with a 29-15 win over Greece. The halftime score was 14-7.

The nine-point difference is significant because in the event that Greece wins the next game, the victor will be decided on the points average.

The return game, on Sunday in Athens, is expected to be tougher, with supportive Greek crowd in tow.

Cyprus is the third and weakest learn in this group from which one country will advance to the next round of the qualifying rounds to play against France. Slovenia and the Czech Republic.

Outstanding in last night's victory at Hadar Yosef were shooter Idan Maimon who scored 14 of his team's points and goalkeeper Vladimir Zeikman who spearheaded the defense. About 200 fans watched the host team lead from the start against an unexpectedly lax opponent. Along with the praise for the deft passing and defense of the Israelis, the precious points wasted in front of the net by Guy Rubin and Roi Ben Hayoun will be surely remembered by coach Sheli Bar-Sela.

For Greece, Nikolas Gramaticos was in a league of his own, but even bis sharp play often ended not in the net, but in Zaikman's trusty hands.

Summer time cut debated

LIAT COLLINS

Summer time and the living ain't easy. At least if you have to get up early to pray.

Interior Minister Eli Suissa (Shas) yesterday announced his suggestion that daylight saving time be cut by 50 days. Under his proposal, approved by the ministerial committee on legislation. day-light saving time would come in force at midnight Saturday, March 22 and expire 175 days later at midnight Saturday, September 13. It was meant to be in force between March 13 and October 18. The new dates need to be approved by the Knesset.

The suggestion for the shorter period follows government discussions in which ministers raised the point that, among other things, these dates would affect those who fast on Yom Kippur, schoolchildren who would have to get up in the dark: and the religious public which would find it difficult to have time to pray before work if sunrise is at 6:43 a.m. The Knesset plenum discussed the issue yesterday when MK Avraham Poraz (Shinui-Meretz) raised it in a motion to the agen-

Suissa told the MKs the longer period would affect the majority of the Jewish public, which fasts on Yom Kippur and holds a Pessah seder service which would end too late for many children. It will also affect those who rise for slihot [penitential] prayers leading up to Rosh Hashana, be said.

Poraz politely disagreed with Suissa and described the shorter daylight saving time period as "illogical."

"Although I feel badly for those who say penilential prayers in the month of Elul, the vast majority of the public enjoys daylight saving time and you can't impose on the majority because of the difficulty of a minority."

He said daylight saving time brings a huge economic savings in terms of energy consumption.

NRP bill: Annex lands if Palestinians declare state

By LIAT COLLINS

The National Religious Party has submitted a bill which calls for declaring Israeli sovereignty over the sections of Judea. Samaria and Gaza under Israel's security control - areas B and C - if the Palestinians declare a state.

In Area B, Israel maintains seeurity control and the Palestinian Authority civil control, while in Area C Israel has sole control,

The NRP believes that Israeli sovereignty should be in force over all of Judea, Samaria and Gaza in any case, faction chairman Hanan Porat said, but added that this should be done through creating a broad national consen-

The bill was signed by five NRP MKs: Porat; Shaul

MKs wrote: "Recently statements have been made by the chairman of the Palestinian Authority and senior PA officials about the intention to declare a Palestinian state in the not too distant future. Among all the violations of the agreements between the PA and Israel, there is no cruder violation than this. We therefore suggest that the Knesset establish a law that such a declaration by the PA on establishing a state would mean that Israel would enforce its laws, judiciary and administration over areas B and C." The MKs note that the government could do this even without Knessei approval under a law dating from 1948 which was implemented in 1967 in the case of east Jerusalem.

Indian scientists interested in Israeli high-tech product know-how

By JUDY SIEGEL

Negotiations to export Israeli know-how in laser and environmental products are being held between the Hebrew University and scientific institutions in India.

Indian scientists showed enthustastic interest in Israeli ideas for manufacturing products for expon and with high added value at the recent Indian Science Congress Association (ISCA) meeting in New Delhi. The convisit to India.

Two Israelis invited to speak were Prof. Renata (Rina) Reisfeld, a senior inorganic chemist at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, and Aharon Gedanker, a professor of chemistry at Bar-llan University in Ramat Gan.

In an interview yesterday, Reisfeld said that India, with its 950 million inhabitants, is a "very rich country in terms of resources

It has some very good scientists, and they're trying to benefit society. They realize that most of the country's exports offer low profits, thus they want to develop high-tech products that will bring in more currency." After Indian scientists heard Reisfeld discuss her work in glass and ceramics at a conference in Israel, they invited her to India.

A formal invitation arrived in Jerusalem are solid-state lasers from Dr. C. Garguly, head of the ISCA in Calcutta. "Despite the large Moslem population [in India] there was absolutely no tension over political issues at the conference." Reisfeld said. They and other Moslem delegates from Bangladesh, Pakistan and other countries - were extremely enthusiastic and said they admire Israel greatly for its achievements.
